(54) Title: SWITCH APPARATUS(57) Abstract

The present invention refers to an apparatus for time and space switching data from a first and a second input signal to a first and a second output signal, said apparatus comprising at least four switch elements, each having a first and second input port and an output port. Each one of the switch elements comprises switching means arranged to provide for time-switching of data received from said first input port to provide an output referring to said output port and selecting means for defining a signal to be outputted from said output port by selectively combining said output from said switching means and data received via said second input port, the mutual order of said data received via said second port being the same when incorporated into said signal as when received via said input port.

Cited documents in the search report:

D1: WO, A2, 9532599

D2: IEEE 1355 tutorial, 25 Oct. 1996

D3: WO, A1, 9403021

D4: " BMSN and spidernet as large scale ATM switch interconnection architectures" Cheung et al. 8-12 June 1997.

D1 relates to a non-blocking switching network for the cross-connection of transmission signals and especially SDH signals. In the telecommunications field, within transmission technology a shift is being made from manual switching to the use of remote-controlled cross connect equipment for the transmission of time-divided signals in a telecommunications network.

D2 relates to different packet switches, and how they work.

D3 relates to a method for implementing switching in the time domain, and to a method for implementing switching in the space domain, for signals of several different levels of hierarchy, the signals having a common frame structure. An example of such a frame structure is the frame structure of an STM-1 signal used in the SDH system

D4 relates to system that shows how paths can be established and how cells are self-routed through the interconnected fabric.

The documents cited in the International Search Report represent the prior art. The claimed invention stated in claims 1-10 is not considered to be anticipated by these documents.

Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Continuation of: v

None of the documents or any relevant combination of them reveal an apparatus for time and space switching data from a first and a second input signal to a first and a second output signal as described by these claims.

According to the arguments stated above, the invention claimed in claims 1-10 is novel, considered to involve an inventive step and have industrial applicability.
